She/her/hers

Kourtney Paul is an examiner in the Supervision and Regulation Department at the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland. She leads and participates in community and regional state member bank examinations and holding company inspections by identifying and analyzing emerging trends within the banking industry. Ms. Paul also assesses key risks, internal controls, and compliance with banking laws and regulations to ensure the safety and soundness of depository institutions within the Fourth Federal Reserve District. She further communicates risks regarding supervisory activities to bank executives and Cleveland Reserve Bank leadership and provides coaching to examiners completing the Community Banking Organizations Examiner Commissioning Program.

Ms. Paul joined the Bank in June 2016 as an intern in the Credit Risk Management Department. The following summer, she returned as an intern on the community banking organizations business line and joined the Bank full-time in June 2018.

Ms. Paul holds a BS in business administration and Spanish from Marist College.
