

Alexandria Halmbacher

Alexandria Halmbacher joined the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland in 2018 as a regional outreach coordinator at the Bank's Cincinnati branch. In 2019, she became the education and museum outreach manager. She is responsible for overseeing the development and execution of the department's strategic initiatives across the Bank's four-state district including Ohio, western Pennsylvania, eastern Kentucky and the northern panhandle of West Virginia.

Prior to joining the Cleveland Fed, Alexandria served as the Unit Manager of Education Products at the Ohio History Connection, where she oversaw the development of several curriculum-based projects such as Ohio as America, a 4th grade online social studies textbook, the Teacher-In-Residence Program, K-12 curriculum for local and national stakeholders including the Texas Historical Commission and the Eastern Shawnee Tribe of Oklahoma, and The Queen City, a 3rd grade online social studies textbook for Cincinnati Public Schools. She also served on the Ohio Department of Education's advisory board for the revision of the State's financial literacy and social studies standards.

Alexandria has a BA in Anthropology from the University of Cincinnati and an MA in Anthropology from the University of Colorado.
