

National Road, 1941

Concrete began to surpass brick and dirt as the preferred road-surface material in 1912, but it wasn't until the Federal Highway Act of 1938 that an interstate highway system was considered, proposed by President Roosevelt as a way of providing jobs. The goal of the act was to study the feasibility of a national, six-route, toll-road network.

Superhighways: An American Icon

The Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways has over 40,000 miles of interstates, which represent 1 percent of our nation's total road length, yet carry over 20 percent of its traffic. There is hardly one aspect of American society that has not been affected by the interstates.
